Hi Pete,

It ___(0)___ great to hear ___(1)___ you. Sorry for not ___(2)___ your e-mail sooner. I've been very busy and, as I ___(3)___ you, I found a new job in a supermarket and the first days have been hard. It's fine, though, I enjoy the work, it's very interesting and I'm learning all the time. Besides, my workmates are very nice and ___(4)___ .

I was sorry to hear you failed the Maths exam. I'm sure it was hard and you normally get good marks. Well, next time, it ___(5)___ better. My exams were difficult too, but not ___(6)___ the ones I took in June, so there were ___(7)___ unpleasant surprises. My teachers were helpful and advised me whenever I needed it.

Have you met Sam ___(8)___ ? If you ___(9)___ him, please can you tell him I need the book he borrowed from me?

I almost forgot! I'm giving a party ___(10)___ February. I'd love you to come. You can bring a friend with you. What about Sue? Are you still dating her?

Tell me if you can make it.

Best wishes,

Sean

In 1986, after he finished his studies in agricultural engineering, Michel Lescanne established Nutriset, a company that manufactures products to stop malnutrition in Southern countries.

At the beginning, people thought he was too idealistic, he worked alone in his kitchen. At present, his company has 130 employees in France, 700 worldwide and in 2010, they saved 4 million children. To do this it was necessary to research, try a lot of products before finding the right formula. Contrary to what most people believe, giving food to a malnourished child is not enough to cure them. They need a specific treatment. Doctors in the past tried diluting a variety of powders in water but most water in Africa was infested with bacteria. Finally, in 1977, Plumpy Nut was launched ; a beige paste made with peanut, sugar, milk, mineral salts and vitamins, which has increased the rate of cured children from 60 % to 95 %.

The next objective is to help countries which want to manufacture the paste themselves. For the moment, in Ethiopia the experience has been successful and this country covers 80 % of its production and gives jobs to 300 people. This is a model that Michel Lescanne would like to develop in Asia and Latin America.

Plumpy Nut has been patented since 1997 so no one can steal their idea but they refuse to do the same in rich countries. If the product was made there, their principal goal would be to make a profit and they would not support the local projects in poor countries.

Us proposem algunes respostes, però també es considera correcta qualsevol altra que sigui coherent i demostri la comprensió del text.

a) Is hunger* a problem affecting poor countries exclusively?

* Hunger: fam

{In my opinion / I think} hunger {affects / is a problem in} all the world. {In rich countries / In developed countries} there are people who don't have enough food but we can't see them.

{In my opinion / I think} hunger affects poor countries. In rich countries some people don't have enough food but this situation is worse in places where there are wars, there is no water and where the situation has lasted for a long time.

b) What do you think it is necessary to do to eliminate hunger in the world?

I think rich countries should share resources with poor countries and let them sell their products without limitations. I think rich countries should give money and technical support to poor countries and should help them resolve their political {problems / wars}.
