9. What did Edward Kennedy do while at Harvard, and what happened to him?

Edward Kennedy was a student at Harvard and asked a friend of his to take his Spanish final exam for him. He was accused and found guilty by university authorities of academic dishonesty, and had to interrupt his studies at Harvard for two years.

10. What did authorities at Dartmouth College do about accusations of cheating in a computer science class? Do you agree with their final decision?

Dartmouth officials investigated close to 80 students accused of cheating. After many interviews and studying some 500 pages of evidence, they were not able to determine exactly who had cheated and who had not, so they decided to declare all the accused students innocent.

(Obviously, the person writing the exam can agree or disagree with Dartmouth's actions; the point is for them to write something in their own words about this incident.)
